Dilemma of a Nation

If we share convoluted dreams from triumphs of the past, Do we make solemn trips to utopian Promise Land?

If we unveil the ditties of war to avenge those winging causes, Do we undo those wrongs, at the pinnacle of power?

We make to salvage the land and alter the state of affairs. Do we convince the moles that dwell within as wolves?

The chief assumes a god we cower at his vicious rod. Do we thwart his ethnic rule whose ways defy our will?

His gait betrays a cheerful stunt in caveat lines of deceit: "I am for all of you; I am for nobody".

Do we honor the hope revolt brings; Or endure the joys misery permits. If the land reels in mistrust, do we dive in the pool of despair?

We bewail the carnage of lies, Spoken from the pulpit of CHANGE. It gratifies no taste of hunger, which brews from the scrawny flesh of the masses The land congeals of blood And mother earth conjugates flames. ..

We decry the neglect for rule of law that honors our freedom, turned sour It pacifies no heedless youth whose heart is set for mayhem and destruct. The idle hand that hatches infamous eggs, betrays the urgent call for a peaceful end.

If we salvage the foothill of power, do we ignore the agitators on the verge of war? We douse in the clouds of confusion do we query the gods of verdict the anwers that linger within the calabash of the future?

We watch, as the carnage deteriorates: of bandits kidnapping for ransom of nomads ravaging farmlands of gunmen murdering detectives of debts scaling the horizon unnerving the heartof the nation.

If we share convoluted dreams from triumphs of tomorrow, Do we inquire from *Chukwu Okike** the fate of this great clime?

Chukwu Okike - The Supreme Being for Igbo spirituality and the source of creation.
