

We Walked in Like This

What vain camouflage we are Cracked and uncracked Matched and unmatched in thwarted longings of the heart!

Brownish-whitish,
greenish-brownish,
we strike many colours concealing ordinary truth.
We lull our conscience to sleep forcing it into frailty.

We exchange little conversation—
a silent minute clouded in anxious wishes of fear and hope.
Certainly, we grieve more than angered when we raise the missile of our hearts lacking soothing speech fancied for peace.

Ifeoma Ezinne Odinye, PhD

Senior Lecturer, Department of Language and Literature
Nnamdi Azikiwe University, Awka, Nigeria

Email: ifeomaodinye@gmail.com

ie.odinye@unizik.edu.ng